4. AHAC INCENTIVES REPORT

The City of Tampa's AHAC Incentives Report is a document created by the local Affordable Housing Advisory Committee and submitted annually to the Florida Housing Finance Corporation by December 31st, detailing strategies and incentives to encourage the development and preservation of affordable housing.

These incentives include items like expedited permitting, fee waivers, increased densities, and other regulatory changes aimed at reducing the cost of building affordable housing in Tampa.

Jim McCarthy states the bonus provisions are expensive to developers. He provided an example, if a property is zoned for a duplex and to get the price-point down to where its affordable and has future land use, the costs at the end of the process can be around $30,000. Mr. McCarthy questions where the revenue from the bonus provision goes, and the transparency of the fee schedule. City staff from other departments will be invited to a future AHAC meeting to explain density bonus in further detail.

Juawana Colbert asked what the timeline is for expedited permits. City staff will inquire about the policy and procedures regarding expedited permits. Ernest Coney wants this process to be measured with reasonable standards.

Debra Koehler asked if a developer can choose to have the impact fees due upon Certificate of Occupancy verses having to pay at the time of pulling permits for affordable housing projects.

A draft of the Land Development Code should be available by the end of September. The remaining LDC will be delivered in tranches accompanied by public meetings.

The Committee discussed SB 1730 - Yes, In God's Backyard (YIGBY) with Casa Belmar being a good example.
